

Corporate Values

The RE CPD Team is managed and funded by the RE Vocational Education and Training Trust, a registered charity. The Team's work is the Trust's main source of income, which is derived from public (non-MOD) funding for Apprenticeships together with some of the other schemes which we administer.

The objects of the Trust are:

“to promote the efficiency of the Army and particularly the military efficiency of the Royal Engineers, by promoting and supporting the involvement of its personnel in nationally recognised vocational education and training schemes”

Vision

To provide expert support and guidance on qualifications and training, for every soldier within the Corps of the Royal Engineers. All soldiers should have access to training and qualifications that enable them to excel in their career within the Corps, and support them in their transition to life outside the Army.

Our aims

- Expand the range of qualifications that we offer to support soldiers over their full Military career
- Deliver high quality training and qualifications to build on soldiers' existing skills and knowledge
- Raise success rates for soldiers and consistently achieve the highest success rates over all Army training contracts
- Continuously improve the standards of teaching and learning to encourage excellence from both staff and soldiers
- Offer a safe and supportive environment for learning
- Attract and retain high quality staff, recognise the contribution each makes to the Trust and support their professional development
- Develop mutually beneficial partnerships with other organisations involved in the training of Royal Engineers
